Subject: Final ANPRM Comment Total

Hi Andrew,

The total number of comments we received on the ANPRM is 115,916*

This number covers:

- 77,463 paper petition submitted from Nat'l Association for Gun Rights
- 1,911 petition of names submitted from Organization for Action
- 100 petition of names submitted from Generation Progress
- 736 that fell under "Do Not Post" because they didn't meet the posting guidelines or came in late
- 35,706 unique comments

*This number includes duplicates, but for purposes of comment review, I've tried to weed that those out, but it's really not a significant number. Also, this number does not include the 3 withdrawn comments.

Thanks!! Vivian

23564 (PS-09)	Michael Swenson	1	Bad people don't follow laws, will still do bad things	Las Vegas largely due to volume of people. If bump stocks were already banned, it wouldn't have stopped shooter. Firing Rate as: $F = 60 / (t + t_c)$ Where: F = rate of firing, t_c = time of firing cycle in seconds Time of a firing cycle clearly defined in design documents accepted by US Government are: $T_c = T + t_c + t_d$ Where: t_c = counter recoil time, t_d = recoil time of bolt, t_d = time interval of dwell between counter recoil and recoil cycles. This is not a rule on a mechanical feature but a rule proposed on the rate at which a FI performs an action. 26 U.S. Code § 5845 is clearly a prohibition on mechanical features of a fire arm. Devices already in interstate commerce not serial numbered, traced or dated. No way to distinguish grandfathered and new devices... would make citizens and manufacturers commit a punishable criminal act... prohibited per Beazell v. Ohio. Registration would create an export facto tax (very challengeable in court).
